LSTA Project Abstracts 2002–2003

INDIVIDUAL PROJECTS
(LSTA grants awarded by the California State Library)

Alameda County Library: Reciprocal Outreach Service $101,200

The Alameda County Library is working with the Hayward Public Library and the San Leandro Public Library to reduce barriers to literacy enrollment, focusing on an extensive community outreach campaign and a reciprocal literacy service agreement.

Beaumont Library District: Teens Connect $89,600

Teens and seniors are paired as teams for computer training, then apply and expand their skills through an inter-generational mentoring partnership.

Butte County Library:
Library, Literacy & Lap Tops for Learners $81,311

Using a large, specially-designed mobile resource vehicle and partnerships with agencies and organizations throughout the county, the library is taking library, literacy, and library technology services directly to low income preschool children (ages 0-5) and their parents and caregivers.

California Historical Society (San Francisco):
Photography Collection Cataloging $253,796

The unique photography collections of the Society's library document California's local history through thousands of images of people, places, and significant events. Through this project, the library is organizing 250 collections and creating finding aids to them.

California State University, Chico:
Northeastern California Native American Multimedia Collection $155,254

Original resources in all formats – audio, video, still image, and paper – from 10 Elders of local and regional California Native American tribes are being digitally preserved, and online descriptions with searchable text will be available on the Internet to assure widespread access by people statewide. Local access will also be available at CSU, Chico.

California State University, Northridge:
San Fernando Valley History Digital Library   $137,176

The library is expanding its online history of the San Fernando Valley by gathering together materials from 30 local organizations and institutions on the social and political changes in the region. Digitally-scanned objects, oral history interviews, and links to related Web-based sources are included.

Camarena Memorial Library (Calexico):
Latino Video Link   $77,676

Three public libraries, Calexico, Brawley, and Imperial County, will present three Spanish language, interactive videoconferences as an information and outreach project to promote library services to the Latino communities in Imperial County. Proposed topics range from health care and parenting to financial management.

Cerritos Public Library:
New Service Models for Sustainable Libraries   $372,295

The landmark "learning experience library," widely praised by people and government officials nationwide, opened to great acclaim in 2002. Through this project, 100 people will participate in a two-day seminar to introduce them to new and innovative service concepts, with the Cerritos Public Library as the host and the focus.

County of Los Angeles Public Library:
Working With Kids @ Your Library Internship Program   $69,263

Sixteen undergraduate students will serve as program assistants in the library's mammoth 2003 Summer Reading Program for children. Through this win-win approach, the students are introduced to librarianship as a career and the children receive valuable one-on-one assistance.

Del Norte County Public Library District:
Community Library Outreach   $40,299

Satellite libraries are being established in the community centers of Smith River and Klamath, allowing people in these rural, isolated areas to obtain public library services.

Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender Historical Society (San Francisco): Community-Based GLBT Archives Initiatives $142,851

The Society's library is working with special, college, and public libraries to develop a consortium providing mediated access to their combined resources. Initiatives are directed at developing collaborative research tools primarily for serious research purposes.

Glendale Public Library: Senior Internet Training Video $10,873

The library is working with the local Glendale Cable Channel 6 (GTV 6) to develop training videos that will allow seniors to reinforce their library-sponsored computer training afterward, at home, and will allow all community residents to obtain self-paced instruction in the use of computers and the Internet.

Kern County Library: Cyber Seniors $52,555

Four computer stations are being added to the Rathbun Branch Library, in an area located and designed to meet the needs of senior citizens, where the library is sponsoring computer and information literacy classes specifically geared to seniors' learning styles and interests.

Kern County Library: Teen Scene $88,330

The Main Library in Bakersfield is developing a premier area for teenagers, well stocked with books, computer workstations, and other materials.

Los Angeles Public Library: First Source $339,270

First Source provides online access to hundreds of commercial and original databases for the branch libraries of Los Angeles Public Library and the regional reference centers, so providing Californians statewide with current and authoritative information.

Metropolitan Cooperative Library System (Pasadena): From Interns to Library Leaders $225,264

Under this recruitment program, library school students work as paid interns in the public libraries in Southern California. The students gain valuable work experience and an introduction to public librarianship, while the libraries benefit from the work of enthusiastic graduate students while grooming future colleagues.

Metropolitan Cooperative Library System (Pasadena):
 24/7 Reference/Q & A Café Statewide Virtual Reference Project

$1,061,621

24 hour virtual reference programs have been developed and offered in both the Los Angeles basin and the San Francisco Bay Area over the past two years. This project joins the two programs into a single entity with a single workforce and develops and provides access to a greater set of software and information databases to serve library users statewide.

Bruggemeyer Memorial Library (Monterey Park):
Writers' Workshop   $8,481

The library is sponsoring a ten-session workshop on writing to help diverse immigrant people tell their personal stories. Participants improve their English writing skills and the library uses the true stories to enhance its local history collection on Monterey Park. A guide for other libraries on how to conduct such workshops will be developed and distributed throughout California.

National City Public Library:
California Public Library Video Network   $64,449

Forty public libraries with interactive videoconferencing capacity are forming a network to share public programs and training activities by sponsoring the event in one location with reception and live interaction with the speakers in 39 other sites. Twelve multi-site videoconferences are taking place this year as the libraries develop and refine common policies and procedures.

National City Public Library: Learn @ NCPL   $115,159

People are receiving assistance in online information seeking and use of computers, with an emphasis on job skills for youth, through eight-week training sessions. Special elements of the project include an after-school component for teens in a local school district and tutoring assistance for adults to improve their job skills.

Newport Beach Public Library: Library Services to Seniors   $45,959

The Homebound program initiated under an LSTA grant last year is being enhanced and strengthened by matching trained volunteers with homebound residents. The volunteers are delivering library materials on a monthly basis, and an e-mail exchange allows book discussions among the participants.

ONE Institute & Archives (Los Angeles):
Internet Connectivity Leading to Enhanced Information Access $50,000

The library is cataloging the 3,900 magazines and newspapers in its specialized collection, adding those records to the OCLC online database, loading their records into the University of Southern California library catalog, and providing increased collection access within its library.

Orange Public Library: Historic Orange Preservation Online $49,000

Over one thousand local history materials (photos, books, maps, original documents, newspapers, and memorabilia) are being digitized so that people can view them online through the library's Web site. The focus is on three subjects: Old Towne Orange historic homes and businesses, the City's citrus and agricultural heritage, and developer Joseph Eichler and the legacy of Eichler homes.

Pomona Public Library:
Local History Digital Preservation Technology Acquisitions $49,906

The library is digitizing 12,000 images from its local history archives (books, photos, manuscripts, maps, and artifacts) and placing them online for widespread public access. Priority is being placed on the renowned Frasher photo collection.

Redwood City Public Library:
Surviving the Internment: Redwood City Remembers $50,000

The Morrish Collection, which traces Redwood City's experience in the Japanese American internment during World War II, will be the centerpiece of a local history Web site. It will include photos, documents, and streaming video documentary footage of interviews with the descendant of the local banker who corresponded with 26 interned Japanese American families over five years. Local community groups are contributing oral histories, documents, and photos that further enhance the story of Redwood City during that time.

Sacramento Public Library: Sacramento History Online   $185,866

The agricultural history of the Sacramento Valley, as told in the 1,000 original primary source materials from 1880-1929 held by four participating institutions (the California State Railroad Museum Library, the Sacramento Room of the Sacramento Public Library, the Sacramento Archives and Museum Collection Center, and the California History Room of the California State Library) are being digitized. The images will be placed on a Web site and accompanied by a curriculum guide prepared by the Sacramento County Office of Education.

San Bernardino County Library:
Regional Environmental Literacy Initiative   $112,981

The soon-to-be-opened new Highland Branch Library will house a full-fledged Environmental Learning Center, encompassing information resources, public programs, workshops, and exhibits on a wide array of topics related to the environment. Although the general public is the primary audience for the center, special resources and activities are also targeted for elementary school children.

San Diego County Public Law Library:
Community Outreach and Education   $54,497

Increasingly, people are representing themselves in court cases, and the mistakes made are costly both for individuals and the overworked court system. Under this project, the county law library is training people in legal literacy and court procedures while teaching public librarians about the law library's resources and services so that referrals will be made.

Society of California Pioneers (San Francisco):
Reminiscences of Early Pioneers   $30,674

Handwritten and typewritten ledger books of early members of the Society cover their travel to and life in California. These 154 documents are being digitized by the library for a Web site, with finding aids and catalog records available online.

South Pasadena Public Library:
Local History Collection Digitization   $50,000

The library is preserving materials from its local history collection while digitizing them and placing them on a Web site for widespread public access. A key focus for the project is inclusion of the reproductions of old family photos shared by South Pasadena residents.

Stanford University: Geological Survey Map and Field Notebook Access $27,530

Maps and field notebooks of California, created by the Stanford Geological Survey between 1890 and 1990, are being digitized for a Web site. These items will also be cataloged and indexed so that people can identify them.

Trinity County Free Library: Integrated Library System $50,000

Trinity County Free Library is installing a local automation system, enabling people to identify local library materials online as well as positioning the library to link its catalog to the automated catalogs of other libraries for interlibrary loan purposes.

Tuolumne County Free Public Library:
Mobile Library and Literacy Lab $86,788

Tuolumne County's rural residents are obtaining library resources and literacy services through the first modern mobile library in the Mother Lode. Computers and satellite Internet access are among the enhancements of the unit, which has a regular schedule of weekly stops plus seasonal and special event visits.

University of California, Berkeley:
1906 San Francisco Earthquake and Fire Digital Archives $200,386

In the third year of this project, the University is completing a thematic Web site of primary source materials drawn from the library collection (photos, documents, manuscripts, paintings, drawings, and letters) to document the San Francisco earthquake and fire of 1906.

University of California, California Digital Library (Oakland):
Testing Model for Sustainable Online Archive of California $249,981

The statewide University of California system is collaborating with LSTA funded local history digitization projects to develop a single point of online access for finding aids to the archival collections created by academic and public libraries. The Online Archive of California (OAC) resides on a Web site. Standard formats and tools have been prepared so that all the finding aids have common search features, and the OAC provides a permanent storage and retrieval service.

University of California, Davis:
Gary Snyder Papers Online Archive $86,765

UC, Davis is the repository for the personal papers of Gary Snyder, a Pulitzer Prizewinning California poet. Through this grant, the library is preparing an online finding aid for those papers which reflects his life and works. Mr. Snyder himself will review the completed guide for accuracy and refinement at the project's conclusion.

University of California, Irvine:
Southeast Asian Archive $65,540

The library's archives document the experiences of Cambodian, Laotian, and Vietnamese refugees and immigrants who settled in California since the end of the Vietnam War. These boxes of unique materials – including photos and ephemera related to San Francisco Bay Area Laotian communities, artifacts used by Hmong and Mien refugees in Thai refugee camps, and Southeast Asian refugee and resettlement materials – are being identified and organized under this project. Finding aids are being prepared, which will become available online so that interested people and researchers can examine or request copies of the materials.

University of California, Los Angeles:
Programs of the California Center for the Book $263,805

The recently-established California Center for the Book, hosted by UCLA, is providing cultural programs for people statewide related to reading and literature. Programs this year include "Letters About Literature" (a reading-and-writing contest for children and teenagers), "Reach Out and Read Aloud," and "Women of Mystery" (a book discussion program for adults).

University of California, Riverside:
Preserving and Providing Access to Newspaper Microfilms $60,984

The University library obtained approximately 14,000 reels of microfilmed California newspaper negatives, with the 300 newspaper titles coming from all over the state and many dating back to the 19th century. The negatives are thought to be the only surviving record of many early California newspapers. Through this project, the library is identifying and preserving the original negatives while creating service copies that can be used by libraries to loan to people statewide.

University of Judaism (Los Angeles):
Conversion of Resources in Jewish History and Culture   $87,283

The library is making the catalog records of 32,000 titles from its huge Judaica collection available online, allowing people to identify and request the items directly or through interlibrary loan. These materials include works on Jewish history, Middle Eastern history, Hebrew and Yiddish literature, the Bible, and rabbinical commentaries.

University of Southern California (Los Angeles):
Access to History: Cataloging the California Testimonies of the Holocaust   $150,000

The library is cataloging 270 historical videotaped testimonies about the Holocaust by California-based survivors and witnesses. The Shoah Foundation is a partner in the undertaking.

STATEWIDE PROGRAMS
(LSTA grants awarded by the California State Library)

California Campaign for Libraries   $289,850

This multi-lingual, multi-media campaign promotes use of California's public libraries. In this final year, the campaign will be implemented in the Central Valley and Sacramento/Stockton media markets. The campaign encompasses network and cable TV Public Service Announcements (PSAs), radio PSAs, and outdoor advertising. The spots feature both local spokespeople and celebrities promoting library services.

California Labor History Map   $133,224

Library resources related to California's labor history are the basis for a California Labor Map and Timeline, as well as an interactive Web site. It is informing the public about the diverse and rich history of working people in California, including stories from individuals and communities.

California Stories: Reading "The Grapes of Wrath"   $300,220

   This year is the 100th anniversary of California Pulitzer Prizewinning author John Steinbeck's birth, and his landmark novel The Grapes of Wrath depicts a family moving westward from Oklahoma in search of a better life in California during the depths of the Great Depression.   One hundred and forty-six California public libraries are holding Reading "The Grapes of Wrath" programs ranging from book discussion groups and speakers to musical performances and family history days. The LSTA funds are matched by those from the California Council for the Humanities to support cultural events in:

California's First Peoples $99,000

Currently, the existing K-12 curriculum and most supporting materials designed for school age children in California schools and libraries do not accurately nor sympathetically depict the true history and contributions of California's First Peoples (the California Indian) to the history and development of the state. State law is beginning to rectify this situation by preparing a new curriculum, and this project enhances the initiative with the creation of a thematic photographic history, including all 106 recognized California Indian tribes.

CALZIG $126,500

As libraries increasingly automate their catalogs, the ability to link different automated systems is a key to sharing library resources among them for use by local patrons. This project supports local efforts to demonstrate the viability and effectiveness of a standards-based approach for distributed access to library resources. The project will also test the feasibility of establishing a statewide portal with compatible search functions and identifiers.

Effective Training for Effective Libraries: Reaching Rural Libraries $200,200

Through the Effective Training for Effective Libraries program, 50 workshops are being held in five rural counties to provide high-quality technology training to library staff utilizing the ten-workstation computer training labs created by the Gates Foundation. Library staff will then use their training and the labs to teach technology-related skills to the public. The libraries receiving this intensive training are:

Butte County Library
Humboldt County Public Library
Imperial County (Camarena Memorial Public Library in Calexico)
Mono County Library
Tehama County Library

FULFILL
(Families Utilizing Libraries for Improving Life-long Learning) $49,500

Since 1984, California public libraries have provided adult literacy instruction; many have expanded those programs to include family literacy services for adults with preschool children. This project supports a longitudinal assessment of how the services affected the long-term literacy achievement of the adult or the children, the employment status of the adult, the community-related activities of all family members, and the impact of the program on the volunteer tutors.

Infopeople:
Libraries Mastering Information Technologies $1,617,389

This statewide program is providing training and continuing education in technology for literally thousands of librarians, enabling them to transfer-train Californians statewide as well as to improve the quality of library services. Topics beyond Internet include digitization, database licensing, software resource-sharing, and telecommunications network skills. A variety of delivery modes are being utilized, from classroom/laboratory instruction to seminars, Web-based courses, Webcasting, combinations of lab and Web teaching, self-paced Web tutorials, and a train-the-trainer program.

Libris DESIGN:
A Library Facilities Planning Information System $333,025

This original computer software program and database enables communities and their public libraries to design the best possible buildings for their services, encompassing such specialized facets as library services for people with disabilities. This project continues its development while updating the cost estimates. Since State voters recently approved a $350 million bond act to construct and renovate public libraries, the planning system allows communities to get the most out of each taxpayer dollar.

Literacy Initiatives $313,500

Building on the State-funded, public library-based literacy services, this project is positioning the participating public libraries to improve local services through program management, staff development, assessment/evaluation, peer mentoring, and strategic planning.

Live Homework Help $326,700

Under the Live Homework Help program, young people (grades 5-12) receive online access to expert tutors for a 20-minute, one-on-one homework help session in the basic subjects of math, science, English, and social sciences. The service is available through public libraries for 49 hours each week, in both English and Spanish. Participating libraries are:

Alhambra Public Library
Anaheim Public Library
Azusa City Library
Berkeley Public Library (West Branch Library)
Buena Park Library District
Burbank Public Library (Central Library)
Burlingame Public Library
Chula Vista Public Library (Civic Center Branch Library)

Public Library Services for People with Disabilities $251,790

Under the Public Library Services for People with Disabilities grant program, public libraries are receiving intensive training as they develop new service plans in a community-based planning process. Each library will receive $20,000 – $50,000 to implement its service program, focusing upon the disability(s) with the highest community priority, in July, 2003. The libraries planning and implementing these new service programs are:

Alameda County Library

Rural Library Initiative   $270,600

Rural libraries are expanding their service programs and their capacities through distance-learning, public programs, and volunteers.

Serials Service Bureau Operation $75,000

Although magazines, newspapers, and other serial publications are critical information resources, many libraries have not cataloged them or kept holdings records updated; consequently they could not share them with other libraries. This project merges local records with the statewide database for interlibrary loan purposes.

Youth Services Issues Forum $88,000

To improve public library services to youth-at-risk, a series of training workshops is underway statewide to provide library staff and educators about existing trends and local policies that affect the way teenagers are served (or not served) in their local libraries. This year's series focuses on helping libraries make young adults feel more welcome in the library through customer service training, presented by Patrick Jones, a nationally known young adult advocate.

NATIONAL PROJECTS
(LSTA grants awarded by the Institute of Museum and Library Services)

Elk Valley Rancheria (Crescent City):
Native American Library Services Enhancement $76,941

This project is creating, furnishing, and staffing a new tribal library facility; it will include equipment and public access computers.

Native American Library Services $162,000

Indian tribes in California are using LSTA funds to support core library operations and ensure a minimum level of public library service. Tribes providing basic library services through the Native American Library Services program include:

Barona Band of Mission Indians (Lakeside)
Big Lagoon Rancheria (Trinidad)
Blue Lake Rancheria
Campo Band of Mission Indians
Cedarville Rancheria (Alturas)
Chemehuevi Indian Tribe (Havasua Lake)
Cher-Ae Heights Indian Community of the Trinidad Rancheria
Coyote Valley Band of Pomo Indians (Redwood Valley)

Cuyapaipe Community of Mission Indians (Valley Center)
Elk Valley Rancheria (Crescent City)
Guidiville Rancheria (Talmage)
Hoopa Valley Tribe
Hopland Band of Pomo Indians
Jamul Indian Village
Los Coyotes Band of Cahuilla Mission Indians (Warner Springs)
Manzanita Band of Mission Indians (Boulevard)
Mechoopda Indian Tribe of Chico Rancheria
Mesa Grande Band of Mission Indians (Santa Ysabel)

Pit River Tribe of Californina (Burney)
San Pasqual Band of Mission Indians (Valley Center)
Smith River Rancheria
Yurok Tribe (Eureka)

Pala Band of Mission Indians (Pala):
Native American Library Services Enhancement   $119,507

Through a two-year project, the tribal library is preserving the Cupeno language and traditions by digitizing visual, audio, and print materials. Language curriculum products are being created from this collection, and tribal elders are offering language tutoring sessions.

Stanford University: GATT Digital Archive   $249,420

In this two-year project, the library is digitizing unique General Agreements on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) documents from its inception in 1947 to 1986 and preparing reports on international intellectual property issues.

University of California, Berkeley: Cinefiles:
Pacific Film Archives Film Document Imaging   $149,884

The library is researching and reporting on new approaches to securing copyright permissions for digital copies of film holdings.

University of California, Berkeley:
Going Places in the Catalog   $241,643

In this two-year demonstration project, the University library is showing how geographic location searching in library catalogs can be improved as well as extended to other scholarly and educational resources. It is linking online library catalogs with online gazetteers, displaying geographical maps with latitudinal and longitudinal coordinates.

University of California, California Digital Library:
Library-Museum Collaboration   $337,542

The libraries of the University of California system are developing and completing a formal user evaluation of the Museums and the Online Archive of California test-bed. These evaluation tools may be used by other digital libraries and provide recommendations for service improvement.

University of California, California Digital Library:
National Research and Demonstration   $374,736

In this two-year demonstration project, the University of California statewide system is creating a model preservation repository for multi-institutional digital materials following the Open Archival Information System (OAIS) reference model. The University is also exploring and reporting on issues related to repository operation and policies.

University of California, Merced:
Library-Museum Cooperation   $229,276

In this three-year project, the newly-forming University of California at Merced Library, in collaboration with the Ruth and Sherman Lee Institute for Japanese Art at the Clark Center, will pilot a model of collaboration for developing significant online research collections through the use of Metadata Encoding and Transmission Standard (METS) encoding, as well as digitize holdings of the Institute, including 454 hanging scrolls and 46 folding screens.

University of California, Riverside:
National Research and Demonstration   $249,581

Under this project, the University library is researching and creating open source software tools to enhance functionality and common operations in a collaborative, shared online system.
